

Israeli Military Nears End of Rafah Campaign, Looks Ahead

written by Moshe Fuzaylov | 02.07.2024

Moshe Fuzaylov: There is no such thing as the day after. This is not some reality show with an instant star that is born. The day after is a process that will last for many years. Despite the darkness and the tragedy, a thriving area could be born.

The operation was not conducted in a way that showed decisiveness. The use of raids as a means does not fit the goal. When fighting a guerilla organization, if one does not control the territory, the guerilla fighters come back. Gaza should have been completely conquered from the beginning and controlled by Israel, ... including being responsible for the civilian population.

Published in MediaLine, June 30, 2024.

